Big Bright Future: Making the Case for Optimistic & Loving Leadership

When the wind blows, some people build walls, and some people build windmills. There is a question that pulls at the hearts of humans: are things getting better or worse? Is the ship going down or are we about to launch into a new stratosphere of opportunity? Let’s discover together what has changed in our lifetime and how we can adapt and continue to live with hope and excitement despite the doom and gloom we see on the news.

Session highlights:
- Three major factors that have changed our day-to-day quality of life in the last century (that impact you everyday at work)
- The extraordinary power of the human mind to process change
- The role you get to play as an optimistic and loving leader

Level Up: Create Your Big Bright Future with Coaching Skills

Leadership has changed dramatically – where we used to have top-down authority, we now see leaders creating conversations with those they are leading. Younger generations grew up in a world where opportunities to speak their mind were available to them, and now they expect the same to be true at work. Listening and collaborating in teams are now the benchmarks of a progressive workplace culture.

The purpose of this session is to introduce participants to the critical skills they need to build their emotional intelligence and collaborate with their teams and executives.

Session highlights:
- How to use curiosity to discover more efficient solutions
- The three levels of listening
- How to ask open-ended empowering questions
